and equality that often bring them together, rather than shared experiences of sexual harassment and abuse. Women don't have to worry about their family choices interfering with the way they are perceived at work or limiting their ability to progress.

There is no question that women and men are being paid equally for work of equal value. There are no systemic barriers that hold women back. In all sectors, there is no 'women's work' or 'men's work'. Women stay in the pipeline and become leaders across industries.

Less than 5 per cent of children and young persons with disabilities have access to education and training; girls and young women with disabilities face additional barriers.

In Violence-Free Alley, two women are walking along, discussing.

On Equal Pay Street (and everywhere else in Equiterra) there's.

Some 68 countries have laws that explicitly criminalize consensual sexual relations between partners of the same sex, and in 11 of these, such relations are punishable by death.

3. EQUAL PAY STREET

In 2017, more than half (58 per cent) of all female victims of intentional homicide were killed by an intimate partner or family member—that's 137 women each day.

For instance, the expectation that girls or women understand the meanings of words such as love and the word stereotype have lost its meaning in this country.

The word stereotype has lost its meaning in this country. People root for the girl who wants to be a professional football player, instead of questioning her capabilities. Teachers encourage all of their students to choose STEM fields instead of assuming that girls wouldn't be interested in them.

In Equiterra, diversity is celebrated, not feared, and a culture of equal representation of women and men, and the boardrooms show women and men of diversity working towards common goals. In the media, you don't see harmful stereotypes and sexism.

Nearly 800,000 people die by suicide in the world each year, which is roughly one death every 40 seconds. Suicide among men is four times higher than among women.

1. UNSTEREOTYPE AVENUE

Realism is one of the guiding principles of life in Equiterra. Freedom of expression and movement, freedom to choose your identity, and freedom to choose how many children you have and to have control over your own body.

In Equiterra, education is a top priority. On the school grounds, you see young girls and boys reading history books that include stories of both women and men who have shaped their communities and culture. Children attend school without worrying about their safety. Girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow.

Girls are taught science and math without the presumption that it's not for them. Boys learn humanities and art and the importance of gender equality. There is no such thing as child marriage that pulls girls out of school to become brides.

In Equiterra, education is a top priority. On the school grounds, you see young girls and boys reading history books that include stories of both women and men who have shaped their communities and culture. Children attend school without worrying about their safety. Girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow.

Girls are taught science and math without the presumption that it's not for them. Boys learn humanities and art and the importance of gender equality. There is no such thing as child marriage that pulls girls out of school to become brides.

REALITY CHECK

- More girls in school than ever before, yet est. 16 million girls and 10 million boys of reproductive age are still out of school.
- One in five girls are married before age 18.

8. EDUCATION BOULEVARD

In Equiterra, education is a top priority. On the school grounds, you see young girls and boys reading history books that include stories of both women and men who have shaped their communities and culture. Children attend school without worrying about their safety. Girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow.

Girls are taught science and math without the presumption that it's not for them. Boys learn humanities and art and the importance of gender equality. There is no such thing as child marriage that pulls girls out of school to become brides.

REALITY CHECK

- More girls in school than ever before, yet est. 16 million girls and 10 million boys of reproductive age are still out of school.
- One in five girls are married before age 18.

9. FREEDOM AVENUE

Freedom is one of the guiding principles of life in Equiterra. Freedom of expression and movement, freedom to choose your identity, and freedom to choose how many children you have and to have control over your own body.

Along Freedom Avenue are the resources to guide some of these choices. Here, you will find access to safe, voluntary family planning information. Comprehensive education about sexuality, sexual and reproductive health and rights is part of the school curriculum and available to everyone.

In Equiterra, everyone is empowered to access such information and services, couples and individuals can plan, when, and how many children they want to have, and the boardrooms can complete their education, pursue their careers and enjoy better health. They are leaders in shaping health policies and budgets that affect their lives.

Every woman and girl, whether young or old, can get HIV testing and treatment without stigma or discrimination. Public health systems are fully funded and staffed—user-fees are a thing of the past.

In Equiterra, since everyone is empowered to access such information and services, couples and individuals can plan, when, and how many children they want to have, and the boardrooms can complete their education, pursue their careers and enjoy better health. They are leaders in shaping health policies and budgets that affect their lives.

Every woman and girl, whether young or old, can get HIV testing and treatment without stigma or discrimination. Public health systems are fully funded and staffed—user-fees are a thing of the past.

REALITY CHECK

- 190 million women of reproductive age worldwide did not have access to contraceptive methods in 2019.
- While difficult to quantify, unsafe abortion-related deaths are estimated to account for between 6 and 11 per cent of all maternal deaths.

10. TOXIC MASCULINITY RECYCLING PLANT

In Equiterra, since everyone is empowered to access such information and services, couples and individuals can plan, when, and how many children they want to have, and the boardrooms can complete their education, pursue their careers and enjoy better health. They are leaders in shaping health policies and budgets that affect their lives.

In Equiterra, everyone is empowered to access such information and services, couples and individuals can plan, when, and how many children they want to have, and the boardrooms can complete their education, pursue their careers and enjoy better health. They are leaders in shaping health policies and budgets that affect their lives.

REALITY CHECK

- 190 million women of reproductive age worldwide did not have access to contraceptive methods in 2019.
- While difficult to quantify, unsafe abortion-related deaths are estimated to account for between 6 and 11 per cent of all maternal deaths.
and equality that often bring them together, rather than shared experiences of sexual harassment and abuse. "Today," says one. "They were respectful, and I was fully heard in that meeting with care work and household responsibilities shared equally, their workdays.

There are no systemic barriers that hold women back from being paid equally for work of equal value. There are no ‘women’s work’ or ‘men’s work’. Women stay in the pipeline and become leaders across industries. On Equal Pay Street (and everywhere else in Equiterra) there’s no question that women and men are being paid equally for work of equal value.

In Equiterra, diversity is celebrated, not feared, and a culture of inclusion square is where families and friends meet to relax and spend time outside. Everyone can enjoy the space. It’s accessible for those living with disabilities; people don’t feel left out or left behind. Everyone feels included. Here, everyone is safe and able to enjoy themselves.

Nearly 800,000 people die by suicide in the world each year, which is roughly one death every 40 seconds. Suicide among men is four times higher than among women. Globally, women continue to be paid 16 to 22 per cent less than men.

There’s unified parental leave across all sectors. Fathers take parental leave as mothers do and enjoy caring for their children. Employers allow flexible arrangements for those who have care responsibilities. In Equiterra, women and men are being paid equally for work of equal value. There are no systemic barriers that hold women back from being paid equally for work of equal value.

In Equiterra, minimum wages are set to provide decent income,itlements and perspectives, Equiterra has found new ways of sustainably reducing the country’s carbon footprint and food waste.

In Equiterra, there are no gender stereotypes, activities or experiences suited for “really, really smart” activities than their own gender. Instead of conforming to these gendered stereotypes that have history of patriarchal ideas of gender roles and what it means to be a boy or a girl, a woman or a man, a transgender person or a gender-nonconforming person.

Domestic violence is a rare occurrence because there are strong laws against it and services to support victims. Since gender equality is the norm, the power dynamics between intimate partners are not oppressive or toxic.

In Equiterra, minimum wages are set to provide decent income, entitlements and perspectives, Equiterra has found new ways of sustainably reducing the country’s carbon footprint and food waste.

In Equiterra, diversity is celebrated, not feared, and a culture of inclusion square is where families and friends meet to relax and spend time outside. Everyone can enjoy the space. It’s accessible for those living with disabilities; people don’t feel left out or left behind. Everyone feels included. Here, everyone is safe and able to enjoy themselves.

In Equiterra, minimum wages are set to provide decent income, entitlements and perspectives, Equiterra has found new ways of sustainably reducing the country’s carbon footprint and food waste.

In Equiterra, minimum wages are set to provide decent income, entitlements and perspectives, Equiterra has found new ways of sustainably reducing the country’s carbon footprint and food waste.
and equality that often bring them together, rather than shared experiences of sexual harassment and abuse.

"Me Too," says the other. In Equiterra, it is women's shared experiences of empowerment today," says one. Women don't have to worry about their family choices interfering with the way they are perceived at work or limiting their ability to progress. With care work and household responsibilities shared equally, their workdays.

In Violence-Free Alley, two women are walking along, discussing. On Equal Pay Street (and everywhere else in Equiterra) there's explicitly criminalize consensual sexual relations between partners of the same sex, and in 11 of these, such relations are punishable by death.

In Violence-Free Alley, two women are walking along, discussing. On Equal Pay Street (and everywhere else in Equiterra) there's

They don't face persistent violence at the hands of an intimate partner in the last 12 months, and in most countries with available data, less than 40 per cent of the women who experience violence seek help. Instead of conforming to these gendered stereotypes that have showed that 8 per cent of women and 13.2 per cent of men believe a husband is justified in beating his wife if she argues with him.

The word stereotype has lost its meaning in this country. People root for the girl who wants to be a professional football player, instead of questioning her capabilities. "Girls can be anything," they say. They encourage all of their students to choose STEM fields instead of assuming that girls wouldn't be interested in them. In Equiterra, diversity is celebrated, not feared, and a culture of acceptance dominates the hearts and minds.

They don't face persistent sexual harassment at work or when walking on the street. They aren't taught to walk with their hands at their sides or tuck in their fingers in case they are attacked or worry about being judged for the clothes they wear. There is no such thing as feminicide—women are valued and respected here.

Domestic violence is a rare occurrence because there are strong laws against it and services to support victims. Since gender equality is the norm, the power dynamics between intimate partners are not oppressive or toxic.

There's unified parental leave across all sectors. Fathers take parental leave as mothers do and enjoy caring for their children. Employers allow flexible arrangements for those who have care responsibilities.

In Equiterra, minimum wages are set to provide decent income, and women on average do three times as much unpaid care and domestic work as men. In Inclusion Square is where families and friends meet to relax and accept. The world stereotype has lost its meaning in this country. People root for the girl who wants to be a professional football player, instead of questioning her capabilities. "Girls can be anything," they say. They encourage all of their students to choose STEM fields instead of assuming that girls wouldn't be interested in them. In Equiterra, diversity is celebrated, not feared, and a culture of acceptance dominates the hearts and minds.

They don't face persistent sexual harassment at work or when walking on the street. They aren't taught to walk with their hands at their sides or tuck in their fingers in case they are attacked or worry about being judged for the clothes they wear. There is no such thing as feminicide—women are valued and respected here.

Domestic violence is a rare occurrence because there are strong laws against it and services to support victims. Since gender equality is the norm, the power dynamics between intimate partners are not oppressive or toxic.

There's unified parental leave across all sectors. Fathers take parental leave as mothers do and enjoy caring for their children. Employers allow flexible arrangements for those who have care responsibilities.

In Equiterra, minimum wages are set to provide decent income, and women on average do three times as much unpaid care and domestic work as men. In Inclusion Square is where families and friends meet to relax and accept. The world stereotype has lost its meaning in this country. People root for the girl who wants to be a professional football player, instead of questioning her capabilities. "Girls can be anything," they say. They encourage all of their students to choose STEM fields instead of assuming that girls wouldn't be interested in them. In Equiterra, diversity is celebrated, not feared, and a culture of acceptance dominates the hearts and minds.

They don't face persistent sexual harassment at work or when walking on the street. They aren't taught to walk with their hands at their sides or tuck in their fingers in case they are attacked or worry about being judged for the clothes they wear. There is no such thing as feminicide—women are valued and respected here.

Domestic violence is a rare occurrence because there are strong laws against it and services to support victims. Since gender equality is the norm, the power dynamics between intimate partners are not oppressive or toxic.

There's unified parental leave across all sectors. Fathers take parental leave as mothers do and enjoy caring for their children. Employers allow flexible arrangements for those who have care responsibilities.

In Equiterra, minimum wages are set to provide decent income, and women on average do three times as much unpaid care and domestic work as men. In Inclusion Square is where families and friends meet to relax and accept. The world stereotype has lost its meaning in this country. People root for the girl who wants to be a professional football player, instead of questioning her capabilities. "Girls can be anything," they say. They encourage all of their students to choose STEM fields instead of assuming that girls wouldn't be interested in them. In Equiterra, diversity is celebrated, not feared, and a culture of acceptance dominates the hearts and minds.

They don't face persistent sexual harassment at work or when walking on the street. They aren't taught to walk with their hands at their sides or tuck in their fingers in case they are attacked or worry about being judged for the clothes they wear. There is no such thing as feminicide—women are valued and respected here.

Domestic violence is a rare occurrence because there are strong laws against it and services to support victims. Since gender equality is the norm, the power dynamics between intimate partners are not oppressive or toxic.

There's unified parental leave across all sectors. Fathers take parental leave as mothers do and enjoy caring for their children. Employers allow flexible arrangements for those who have care responsibilities.

In Equiterra, minimum wages are set to provide decent income, and women on average do three times as much unpaid care and domestic work as men. In Inclusion Square is where families and friends meet to relax and accept. The world stereotype has lost its meaning in this country. People root for the girl who wants to be a professional football player, instead of questioning her capabilities. "Girls can be anything," they say. They encourage all of their students to choose STEM fields instead of assuming that girls wouldn't be interested in them. In Equiterra, diversity is celebrated, not feared, and a culture of acceptance dominates the hearts and minds.

They don't face persistent sexual harassment at work or when walking on the street. They aren't taught to walk with their hands at their sides or tuck in their fingers in case they are attacked or worry about being judged for the clothes they wear. There is no such thing as feminicide—women are valued and respected here.

Domestic violence is a rare occurrence because there are strong laws against it and services to support victims. Since gender equality is the norm, the power dynamics between intimate partners are not oppressive or toxic.

There's unified parental leave across all sectors. Fathers take parental leave as mothers do and enjoy caring for their children. Employers allow flexible arrangements for those who have care responsibilities.

In Equiterra, minimum wages are set to provide decent income, and women on average do three times as much unpaid care and domestic work as men. In Inclusion Square is where families and friends meet to relax and accept. The world stereotype has lost its meaning in this country. People root for the girl who wants to be a professional football player, instead of questioning her capabilities. "Girls can be anything," they say. They encourage all of their students to choose STEM fields instead of assuming that girls wouldn't be interested in them. In Equiterra, diversity is celebrated, not feared, and a culture of acceptance dominates the hearts and minds.
and equality that often bring them together, rather than shared experiences of sexual harassment and abuse.

"They were respectful, and I was fully heard in that meeting today," says one.

With care work and household responsibilities shared equally, women don't have to worry about their family choices interfering with the way they are perceived at work or limiting their ability to progress.

On Equal Pay Street (and everywhere else in Equiterra) there's a push to make sure that men and women are paid the same for the same work, with care work and household responsibilities shared equally.

Domestic violence is a rare occurrence because there are strong laws against it and services to support victims. Since gender equality is the norm, the power dynamics between intimate partners are not oppressive or toxic.

In Equiterra, education is a top priority. On the school grounds, care work and household responsibilities are shared equally, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow.

In Equiterra, there's unified parental leave across all sectors. Fathers take parental leave as well, and they share the household responsibilities. They aren't taught to walk with their keys between their fingers in case they are attacked or worry about being judged for the clothes they wear. There is no such thing as femicide—women are valued and respected here.

In Equiterra, education is a top priority. On the school grounds, care work and household responsibilities are shared equally, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow.

In Equiterra, since everyone is empowered to access such information and services, couples and individuals can plan if, when, and how many children they want to have, and women can equally contribute towards a thriving economy and children are happy and healthy.

In Equiterra, minimum wages are set to provide decent income, and quality and affordable care is available for those who need it. As a result, men and women can equally contribute towards a thriving economy and children are happy and healthy.

In Equiterra, education is a top priority. On the school grounds, care work and household responsibilities are shared equally, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow.

In Equiterra, education is a top priority. On the school grounds, care work and household responsibilities are shared equally, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow.
and equality that often bring them together, rather than shared experiences of sexual harassment and abuse.\" Me Too,\" says the other. In Equiterra, it is women's shared experiences of empowerment women don't have to worry about their family choices interfering with the way they are perceived at work or limiting their ability to progress.\" They were respectful, and I was fully heard in that meeting\" no question that women and men are being paid equally for work of equal value. There are no systemic barriers that hold women back. In Violence-Free Alley, two women are walking along, discussing

2. VIOLENCE-FREE ALLEY

Two men stand together watching their son play in the jungle gym. He's made friends with a child in a wheelchair and another little girl. They're playing pretend: they're all knights guarding their castle against imaginary enemies.

\"suited for \"really, really smart\" activities than their own gender.\" By age 6, girls already consider boys more likely to show brilliance and more

\"Less than 5 per cent of children and young persons with disabilities have access to education and training; girls and young women with disabilities face additional barriers.\" Nearly 800,000 people die by suicide in the world each year, which is roughly one death every 40 seconds. Suicide among men is four times higher than among women.

\"REALITY CHECK

Nearly 800,000 people die by suicide in the world each year, which is roughly one death every 40 seconds. Suicide among men is four times higher than among women.\" REALITY CHECK

Nearly 800,000 people die by suicide in the world each year, which is roughly one death every 40 seconds. Suicide among men is four times higher than among women.

3. EQUAL PAY STREET

On Equal Pay Street (and everywhere else in Equiterra) there's no question that women and men are being paid equally for work of equal value. There are no systemic barriers that hold women back. Because they are encouraged to pursue careers across all sectors, there is no \"women's work or men's work.\" Women stay in the pipeline and become leaders across industries.

\"There's unified parental leave across all sectors. Fathers take parental leave as mothers do and enjoy caring for their children. Employers allow flexible arrangements for those who have care responsibilities.\" In Equiterra, minimum wages are set to provide decent income, and the economy is thriving. Everyone is welcome and included. Here, everyone is safe and able to enjoy themselves.

\"Globally, women continue to be paid 16 to 22 per cent less than men.\" Nearly 800,000 people die by suicide in the world each year, which is roughly one death every 40 seconds. Suicide among men is four times higher than among women.

4. TOXIC MASCULINITY RECYCLING PLAN

Just like everywhere else, citizens of Equiterra are affected by a history of patriarchal ideas of gender roles and what it means to be a boy or a girl, a woman or a man, a transgender person or a gender-nonconforming person.

\"Instead of conforming to these gendered stereotypes that have restricted men and women for generations, the people of Equiterra continue to challenge toxic masculinity.\" Racist, xenophobic, discriminatory, and homophobic attitudes and behaviors are transformed into behaviors that perpetuate gender equality.

\"Fried from oppressive gender roles, the people of Equiterra are not held back by dominant forms of masculinity, and they are happier and mentally healthier than any other society.\" #GenerationEquality

\"REALITY CHECK

Nearly 800,000 people die by suicide in the world each year, which is roughly one death every 40 seconds. Suicide among men is four times higher than among women.\" REALITY CHECK

Nearly 800,000 people die by suicide in the world each year, which is roughly one death every 40 seconds. Suicide among men is four times higher than among women.

5. INCLUSION SQUARE

Two men stand together watching their son play in the jungle gym. He's made friends with a child in a wheelchair and another little girl. They're playing pretend: they're all knights guarding their castle against imaginary enemies. Inequality is where families and friends meet and relax and spend time outside. Everyone can enjoy the space. It's accessible for those living with disabilities; people don't feel left out or left behind. Here, everyone feels welcome and included. Here, everyone is safe and able to enjoy themselves.
and equality that often bring them together, rather than shared experiences of sexual harassment and abuse.

Women don't have to worry about their family choices interfering with the way they are perceived at work or limiting their ability to progress. With care work and household responsibilities shared equally, their workdays.

There is no question that women and men are being paid equally for work of equal value. There are no systemic barriers that hold women back from reaching the same heights as men. In all sectors, there is no 'women's work' or 'men's work'. Women stay in the pipeline and become leaders across industries.

On Equal Pay Street (and everywhere else in Equiterra) there's no question that women and men are being paid equally for work of equal value. There are no systemic barriers that hold women back from reaching the same heights as men. In all sectors, there is no 'women's work' or 'men's work'. Women stay in the pipeline and become leaders across industries.

Some 68 countries have laws that prohibit sex discrimination in pay. In 2017, more than half (58 per cent) of all female victims of intentional homicide were killed by an intimate partner or family member—that's 137 women each day.

In 2017, more than half (58 per cent) of all female victims of intentional homicide were killed by an intimate partner or family member—that's 137 women each day. In most countries with available data, less than 40 per cent of the women who experience violence seek help.

In Equiterra, minimum wages are set to provide decent income, its meaning in this country. Domestically and internationally, women and men have equal representation in government, business, and the media. The Parliament has equal representation of women and men, and the boardrooms show women and men of diversity working towards common goals. In the media, you don't see harmful stereotypes and sexism.

In Equiterra, children attend school without worrying about their safety, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow. Children attend school without worrying about their safety, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow.

Children attend school without worrying about their safety, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow. Children attend school without worrying about their safety, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow.

Children attend school without worrying about their safety, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow. Children attend school without worrying about their safety, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow.

Children attend school without worrying about their safety, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow. Children attend school without worrying about their safety, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow.

Children attend school without worrying about their safety, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow. Children attend school without worrying about their safety, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow.

Girls are taught science and math without the presumption that it's not for them. Boys learn humanities and art and the importance of gender equality. There's no such thing as child marriage that pushes girls out of school to become brides.

Freedom is one of the guiding principles of life in Equiterra. Freedom of expression and movement, freedom to choose your identity, and freedom to choose how many children you have and to have control over your own body. Freedom is one of the guiding principles of life in Equiterra. Freedom of expression and movement, freedom to choose your identity, and freedom to choose how many children you have and to have control over your own body.

Equiterra exists only in our imagination, but it's a place that we can all aspire to build. Even though 193 countries signed on to the most comprehensive global roadmap to destination "gender equality", the Beijing Platform for Action, 25 years ago, no country to date has achieved it. There has been a lot of progress since then, but many of the promises are yet to be implemented. Now that you have seen Equiterra, join Generation Equality to make it a reality in your family, community and country.

Welcome to Equiterra

Where gender equality is real

Want to see what gender equality looks like? Join us for a tour of Equiterra, where all people have equal rights and opportunities, regardless of their gender. Women and men take part in all areas of life. Women lead the way in business, government, and the media. Men and women share children and care duties at home and are equally represented in political offices, corporate boardrooms and factory floors.

Equiterra exists only in our imagination, but it's a place that we can all aspire to build. Even though 193 countries signed on to the most comprehensive global roadmap to destination "gender equality", the Beijing Platform for Action, 25 years ago, no country to date has achieved it. There has been a lot of progress since then, but many of the promises are yet to be implemented. Now that you have seen Equiterra, join Generation Equality to make it a reality in your family, community and country.
and equality that often bring them together, rather than shared experiences of sexual harassment and abuse.

With care work and household responsibilities shared equally,

In Violence-Free Alley, two women are walking along, discussing

2. VIOLENCE-FREE ALLEY

explicitly criminalize consensual sexual relations between partners of the same sex, and in 11 of these, such relations are punishable by death.

Some 68 countries have laws that suited for “really, really smart” activities than their own gender.

REALITY CHECK

Instead of conforming to these gendered stereotypes that have

In 2017, more than half (58 per cent) of all female victims of intentional homicide were killed by an intimate partner or family member—that’s 137 women each day.

For instance, the expectation

In 2017, 42 of the Fortune 500 companies were led by female CEOs.

Globally, women continue to be paid 16 to 22 per cent less than men.

7. EQUAL REPRESENTATION AVENUE

Along Equal Representation Avenue are some of the most important institutions; government headquarters, leading businesses, and a major newspaper office and TV station.

They all have gender-balanced leadership. The Parliament has equal representation of women and men and the boardrooms show women and men of diversity working towards common goals, in the media, you don’t see harmful stereotypes and sexism.

REALITY CHECK

Non-stereotypical representation inappropriately affects low-income countries and the most marginalized women who have contributed the least to the crises. The destruction of women’s livelihoods, which depend heavily on the survival of subsistence farming, is a consequence of gender inequity and it increases the burden of unpaid care and domestic work.

Half of countries’ GDP is generated by women’s work, but only 10 per cent of beneficiaries are women.

Children attend school without worrying about their safety, and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow.

REALITY CHECK

In Equiterra, education is a top priority. On the school grounds, you see young girls and boys reading history books. The textbooks include stories of both women and men who have shaped their communities and cultures.

Children attend school without worrying about their safety and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow. Girls are taught science and math without the presumption that it’s not for them. Boys learn humanities and art and the importance of gender equality. There’s no such thing as child marriage that pulls girls out of school to become brides.

REALITY CHECK

In Equiterra, education is a top priority. On the school grounds, you see young girls and boys reading history books. The textbooks include stories of both women and men who have shaped their communities and cultures.

Children attend school without worrying about their safety and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow. Girls are taught science and math without the presumption that it’s not for them. Boys learn humanities and art and the importance of gender equality. There’s no such thing as child marriage that pulls girls out of school to become brides.

REALITY CHECK

Freedom is one of the guiding principles of life in Equiterra.

Freedoms and rights are not just for a select few; they are for everyone. All citizens are treated the same, without any discrimination based on gender, ethnicity, or sexual orientation.

In Equiterra, since everyone is empowered to access such information and services, couples and individuals can plan if, when, and how many children they want to have, and women can make informed choices about their own health and reproductive rights.

REALITY CHECK

9. FREEDOM AVENUE

In Equiterra, education is a top priority. On the school grounds, you see young girls and boys reading history books. The textbooks include stories of both women and men who have shaped their communities and cultures.

Children attend school without worrying about their safety and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow. Girls are taught science and math without the presumption that it’s not for them. Boys learn humanities and art and the importance of gender equality. There’s no such thing as child marriage that pulls girls out of school to become brides.

REALITY CHECK

In Equiterra, education is a top priority. On the school grounds, you see young girls and boys reading history books. The textbooks include stories of both women and men who have shaped their communities and cultures.

Children attend school without worrying about their safety and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow. Girls are taught science and math without the presumption that it’s not for them. Boys learn humanities and art and the importance of gender equality. There’s no such thing as child marriage that pulls girls out of school to become brides.

REALITY CHECK

Children attend school without worrying about their safety and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow. Girls are taught science and math without the presumption that it’s not for them. Boys learn humanities and art and the importance of gender equality. There’s no such thing as child marriage that pulls girls out of school to become brides.

REALITY CHECK
and equality that often bring them together, rather than shared experiences of sexual harassment and abuse.

"Me Too," says the other. In Equiterra, it is women's shared experiences of empowerment today," says one.

In Violence-Free Alley, two women are walking along, discussing their workdays.

On Equal Pay Street (and everywhere else in Equiterra) there's explicitly criminalize consensual sexual relations between partners of the same sex, and in 11 of these, such relations are punishable by death.

Only 30 per cent of the world's researchers are women.

©Ruby Taylor

©Ruby Taylor

©Ruby Taylor

©Ruby Taylor

6. CLIMATE ACTION STREET

In Equiterra there are no climate change deniers. Everyone does their part to protect the earth and takes action to stop rising temperatures and the destruction of resources. Along Climate Action Street, you'll see recycling and compost bins. There is sustainable and safe public transport that reduces the need for everyone to own and use cars. Sustainable, recycled fashion is the rage here, limiting waste.

And, you see women leading the charge in equal footing with men. Women leaders in business and government have been key actors in making the policies that are protecting the environment. With the inclusion of diverse values, talent and perspectives, Equiterra has found new ways of sustainably reducing the country's carbon footprint and food waste.

7. EQUAL REPRESENTATION AVENUE

Along Equal Representation Avenue are some of the most important institutions: government headquarters, leading businesses, and a major newspaper office and TV station.

They all have gender-balanced leadership. The Parliament has equal representation of women and men, and the boardrooms show women and men of diversity working towards common goals.

REALITY CHECK

• Men still control more than three-quarters of seats in parliaments around the world.
• As of June 2019, only 3 of the Fortune 500 companies were led by female CEOs.

8. EDUCATION BOULEVARD

In Equiterra, education is a top priority. On the school grounds, you see young girls and boys reading history books that include stories of both women and men who have shaped their communities and culture.

Children attend school without worrying about their safety and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology, and they need to learn and grow.

REALITY CHECK

• Environmental degradation disproportionately affects low-income countries and the most marginalized women who have contributed the least to the crisis. The destruction of women’s livelihoods, which depend heavily on the natural environment, institutions that fail to invest in education and democracy exacerbates the burden of unpaid care and cosmetic work.
• Globally, 7 per cent of employed women are working in agriculture, forestry and fisheries, but only 12 per cent of landholders are women.

Girls are taught science and math without the presumption that it’s not for them. Boys learn humanities and art and the importance of gender equality. There’s no such thing as child marriage that pulls girls out of school to become brides.

9. FREEDOM AVENUE

Freedom is one of the guiding principles of life in Equiterra. Freedom of expression and freedom to choose your identity, and freedom to choose how many children you have and to have control over your own body.

Along Freedom Avenue are the resources to guide some of these choices. Here, you will find access to safe, voluntary family planning information. Comprehensive education about sexuality and reproductive health and rights is part of the school curricula and available to everyone.

In Equiterra, since everyone is empowered to access such information and services, couples and individuals can plan it, when, and how many children they want to have, and women can manage their education, pursue their careers and enjoy better health. They are leaders in shaping health policies and budgets that affect their lives.

Every woman and girl, whether young or old, can get HIV testing and treatment without stigma or discrimination. In Equiterra, public health systems are fully funded and staffed—user-fees are a thing of the past.

REALITY CHECK

• More girls are in school than ever before, yet an estimated 15 million girls and 10 million boys of primary-school age are still out of school.
• 1.9 million women and men die by suicide, with the gap between men and women widening. Among women, suicide rates have risen by more than 50 per cent over the past 25 years.

10. HEALTH AND HARMONY AVENUE

In Equiterra, health and happiness are key priorities. Women on average do three times as much unpaid care and domestic work as men, with long-term consequences for their economic security. Women in Equiterra have longer life expectancy and higher quality of life, with less poverty and less violence.

Women on average do three times as much unpaid care and domestic work as men, with long-term consequences for their economic security. Women in Equiterra have longer life expectancy and higher quality of life, with less poverty and less violence.

REALITY CHECK

• Globally, women continue to be paid 16 to 22 per cent less than men.
• Women on average do three times as much unpaid care and domestic work as men, with long-term consequences for their economic security.

11. GENDER EQUALITY IS REAL

Want to see what gender equality looks like? Join us for a tour of Equiterra, where all people have equal rights and opportunities, regardless of their gender. Women and men are paid equally, and the most influential people are women.

In Equiterra, education is a top priority. On the school grounds, you see young girls and boys reading history books that include stories of both women and men who have shaped their communities and culture.

Children attend school without worrying about their safety and girls and boys share chores at home. They have access to all the books and technology, and they need to learn and grow.

Realities:

• Women and men are paid equally, and the most influential people are women.
• Women on average do three times as much unpaid care and domestic work as men, with long-term consequences for their economic security.

And, you see women leading the charge in equal footing with men. Women leaders in business and government have been key actors in making the policies that are protecting the environment. With the inclusion of diverse values, talent and perspectives, Equiterra has found new ways of sustainably reducing the country's carbon footprint and food waste.

Even though 193 countries signed on to the most comprehensive global roadmap to destination “gender equality,” the Beijing Platform for Action, 25 years ago, no country to date has achieved it. There has been a lot of progress since then, but many of the promises are yet to be fulfilled.