

Counter-Terrorism and COVID-19: Gendered Perspectives

Simultaneous interpretation in Arabic, Spanish, French and Russian. español, francés y ruso.

Terrorism and responses to it have very real gendered human and social costs. The gendered impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic is exacerbating and complicating these costs. In this dynamic and challenging context, security sectors must balance their responsibility to protect citizens from harm and their responsibility to protect human rights.

Join UN Women, OSCE ODIHR, DCAF - the Geneva Centre for Security Sector Governance, and a panel of experts for a discussion on the gendered impacts of securitized approaches to PVE and CT, the new challenges that have emerged through the global pandemic, and the principles to guide civil society and governments moving forward.
