

Our time, our right:

WE WANT A SUSTAINABLE PLANET!

WOMEN HOLD ONLY 14% OF AGRICULTURAL LAND

WHAT DO WE HAVE?

Global warming, land degradation, threats to income and food security, disparities in access to natural resources with dire consequences for marginalized women (the same ones who have contributed almost nothing to climate change).

WHAT DO WE WANT!

Take gender equality fully on board in climate plans and policies, and fund it like the central priority it is. Extend sustainable, affordable infrastructure and services to everyone. Bring women most vulnerable to climate risks to the centre of decision-making. Move to a regenerative economy where the goal is ecological and social well-being; make it gender-responsive through decent work and social protection for all.

Lebanon is protecting its rural environment by empowering women as leaders. Under a traditional approach to managing natural resources, women like Rima Chaaban Massoud have pioneered farming techniques that safeguard scarce local water supplies. In economically marginalized areas, women's livelihoods are flourishing through new links to markets in Beirut, the capital. Photo: UN Women/Joe Saad
